

DEMOCRATIC OPPORTUNITY. While but few conclusions can be drawn from the returns of last Tuesday's elections in Adams county, because of the fact that local and personal rather than political considerations influence the voters' oftentimes in the spring elections, there are certain indications that the Democratic people of Adams county generally voted their ticket; and that were Democratic victories are and there which indicate the old-time Democratic strength.

Adams county the Democratic victory in the majority and the Democratic party can win. But one thing is required—an interest in the party's affairs, not by a few of the Democrats only, but by all; and the place for that interest to be shown especially is at the primary elections. The party's strength depends largely on the party management, and that management is created at the primaries. Consequently for representative management, full representation at the primaries is essential.

Let the Democrats of Adams county attend the primaries at which delegates to the coming convention are to be elected—delegates to be selected with a view to their Democratic principles and good judgment—and let a single representative of the Democratic party represent the county, and its election, we believe, is assured.

The interest of the few should have no place in the Democratic politics of Adams county, but rather the politics of our party ought to be such as to excite the interest of every member, each one of whom is entitled to consideration. Let the Democrats of Adams county bear in mind the coming elections, and especially the coming primaries. THE CONTEST at Harrisburg took a new turn last Friday. The publication in the newspaper press of direct charges of attempted bribery for the purpose of securing the passage of the Judiciary bill, has caused a great deal of discussion. It is a noteworthy feature of the discussion before the passage of the resolution that it met with no opposition except from the partisans of Senator Quay. It is to be seen, and as the Speaker under such circumstances will hardly dare to organize a whitewash committee, a complete exposure may be expected.

THE PENNSYLVANIA House of Representatives has raised its voice against Congressman Robert of Utah, the man with three wives. Mr. Adams, of Philadelphia, introduced a resolution last Friday morning that polyanthous be removed from the House, and that the House express its protest against the seating of B. H. Roberts, as a member of the next Congress, as a member of the next Congress. EMORY S. MANNING, of Carlisle, Democratic candidate for the legislature, has been elected to the legislature. He succeeds his father, Henry Manning, who died recently. Arthur elected two Democrats and two Republicans councilmen, a Republican gain of one. The Democratic gain one school director.

IN SHIPPENSBURG local opinion carried by a majority of 201, an increase of 33 votes over the election of 1896.

AGAIN POSTPONED. Great Pressure is caused by the postponement of the Quays Trial April 10th. Political circles were shaken to the center by the unexpected postponement to April 10th of the trial of the late Secretary of the United States Senate to Quay and his son, R. L. Quay, on the charge of conspiracy to remove public funds.

Everything was apparently in readiness when District Attorney Rothwell arose and said: "I am sorry to have to postpone the trial because the Commonwealth was not ready."

Questioned whether the district attorney declines to give any reason for the postponement, but added that he submitted to the court the reasons for the postponement. He added that he had no objection to the postponement of the trial of the late Secretary of the United States Senate to Quay and his son, R. L. Quay, on the charge of conspiracy to remove public funds.

FATHER SHANNAHAN NAMED. Official confirmation has come from Rome of the appointment of Rev. John W. Shanahan, of Philadelphia, as Bishop of Harrisburg, to succeed the late Bishop McManister. Father Shanahan is how recognized as one of the ablest prelates of the Catholic Church in the United States.

Rev. Father Shanahan said last Friday morning that he had declined to accept of his appointment as Bishop of Harrisburg to succeed the late Bishop McManister, and that he had declined to accept of his appointment as Bishop of Harrisburg to succeed the late Bishop McManister.

Killed by a Falling Tree.
George Schaefer, of Butler township, was fatally injured on the farm of his father, George Schaefer, in Butler township, near Egleston, on Saturday afternoon by a falling tree.

We have not learned the particulars of the accident, but it seems that a tree which the young man was helping to take down, fell before he expected it, and he was caught under it, receiving his fatal injury from the blow on the head.

He was aged about 24 years and was unmarried.

Mrs. L. J. Jones, notices the public that she will continue the sewing machine business at the old stand, 123 West Middle St., Gettysburg, Pa.

MARCH GARDENING

I like to celebrate Washington's birthday by sowing an ounce of Early Wakefield cabbage seed, which is the beginning of my garden work. Sown at this date and carried along without checking or stunting, the crop is early enough to catch all purposes in connection with the cabbage trade of my section, which not only has to compete with the shipments of southern Ohio, often so large as to demoralize the market, but the remnants of last year's Holland cabbage (American growth), which has such excellent keeping qualities that it frequently keeps until the first of June. The expense of starting in, two or three weeks earlier, for the sake of getting 1,000 early cabbages, is considerable, but paying the cost of the seed and the labor of sowing and carrying along with purchased plants gave me all the experience I wanted about that line, and I am henceforth contented to grow my own, the ability to get my seed from some known reliable source, and to have plants from start to finish growing the cheapest all around. It seems as if winter-grown plants from the south ought to be just the thing, but some of my acquaintances try every year and their competition does not in the least discourage me from not using it to advantage. There may be careful growers at the south who understand growing and packing, but the trial of three different firms by acquaintances has not proved profitable. Last year, in order to have a planting place of 300 feet square, I started with a hot-bed outdoors, but the weather was very unfavorable, and I lost over a week's time and got a cent a head less in consequence. I never could run a hot-bed successfully, and in building a plant-house early in my career I have had but a limited experience in hot-bed management. This year I have a combination plan which, unlike many combinations, seems likely to work to a purpose. After partially draining the house, which is not used through the winter, I constructed a rough frame of some of the bench boards at the furnace end, and put in about fifteen bushels of fresh horse manure mixed with dirt. The manure was a fine one, and the thick, rich surface sufficient to sow the seeds of seed in this. The seed was sown at once and the soil watered with hot water, a couple of gallons being poured into the manure as a starter, and twice more during the first week, raised several inches to avoid cooling, but the surplus heat helps to warm the house, and barring a strong ammonia odor, all is serene. As soon as the cabbages appear, I shall put a spare earthen tier, and the tiers will also be run until they will prick out the plants, March 1. The beauty of the plan is that I do not have to worry or be in the wind and storm to attend to the bed, and can perfectly control the temperature with scarcely any firing. When it is time to prick out the cabbages, it will be time to sow tomatoes, kale, cabbages and other seeds, as well as to start canners, etc., so my time will be more largely and advantageously employed. As the weather is so much more economical, I have not attended to it. Before that time I aim to have a lot of plants and asparagus roots in under the benches, and thus start a new crop of plants upon the new ground, and have a house for starting vegetable plants, I find it a great saving to have a pair of shutters put in to shut off the cold radiation from the glass. As the process of tillage is gradual from Feb. 25 to April 15, or later, all the light and heat that can be shut out of the house not in use may be wholly shut out or sheltered without detriment to the rest. Shutters may also be used at night as well, as is the universal practice with hot beds. Outdoor shutters, as every grower knows, freeze down and become loaded with snow and ice, and result in much broken glass and a disposition to profanity; so the only practical and economical shutter is one that can be used inside. For ease of handling off, my house is raised on a foundation of four-inch brick, and the rafters thirty-eight inches apart, and the rafters thirty-eight inches apart in the clear furnishing a good means of fixing shutters inside. Of course it is impossible to have the shutters full length, so I content myself with the length I get in packing boxes which come to merchants filled with underwear and cheap dry goods generally. The size I prefer is forty by thirty by thirty-six inches, the inside being stiff nailed to each end, while the sides are matched half-inch stuff. Such boxes contain thirteen feet of inch stuff and thirty-eight of half-inch, and I have frequently got as many as five for a dollar, as they lie on the cars just after emptying. As my shutters used to be thirty-eight inches wide, the half-inch stuff in two packing cases will make seven shutters forty-two inches long. The sides being double nailed and matched, it is not practicable to break them off, so I nail a cleat near each end and then saw off close inside the rails, splitting the side to full width from the top, which is already unshorn. In the green-house I nail short cleats to the rafters next the lower end, while the

Scrofula to Consumption

Any one predisposed to Scrofula can never be healthy and vigorous. This taint in the blood naturally gives rise to Consumption. Being such a deep-seated blood disease, Scrofula is the only known cure for Consumption, because it is the only remedy which can reach the disease.

Scrofula is an obstinate blood disease and is beyond the reach of the average blood medicine. Swift's Specific is the only remedy equal to such deep-seated disease.
